“But the stock market isn’t your source, and neither is your job. God is your source! Go ahead and say it out loud: “God is my Source!”

Edwene Gaines

The Four Spiritual Laws of Prosperity

An affirmation, which I embrace today is:

“Today I expect a more abundant life.”

Abundance is a process of mental sobriety. If one is an alcoholic, sobriety means not drinking alcohol. It is toxic to the alcoholic. Mental sobriety means not embracing, taking in (or drinking in) thoughts of lack, fear and limitation. These are toxic to living in faith.

Recovery for an alcoholic is a process of embracing a new way of living. It requires a change of thinking about how life works, acceptance of something greater than yourself and forgiveness of self and others.

If we are to have recovery from an existence of scarcity and imperfection, we must choose to think optimistically, removing fear, being courageous and deepening our spiritual life. Faith is predominant.

Be consistent and begin each morning by visualizing yourself in the stream of Divine Consciousness, which is Love, Wisdom, Power, Intelligence, Creativity, Imagination and is nearer to you than hands and feet; your very breath. Affirm, “God is my Source!”

Practice deepening your conscious contact with the center of divinity within yourself. Take control of your thinking throughout the day.

If you fall off the wagon, don’t despair. As the song says, “Pick yourself up...Dust yourself off... And start all over again.”
