“Children of God, if you would be free, let go of all resistance, and its parents: judging and fear.”
(Giving & Forgiving pg. 20)

I have found myself watching the national news and being fearful and even judgmental. I pray to lift myself, to be teachable, to be forgiving and to be grateful.

My prayers to heal the conflict around our country are not rooted in what I know of black lives, terrorism or of the lives of those in law enforcement or military. For myself, I have not lived in those worlds. I have nothing with which to compare or contrast other than being a human being.

Each of us is a drop in the ocean of Spirit and all the qualities of Spirit are in each drop. I pray believing that each and every one of us living in this world are “Children of God,” All lives matter. We can all benefit from being free from resistance and letting go and letting God remove us from judgment and fear. “Let” is a powerful word.

“Let” means to allow or to permit. When we pray, we ask God for guidance and support. We allow God to do the work and accept the outcome.

Of ourselves, we can do nothing other than seek the truth in any situation and to take positive action. If we are basing our action on spiritual principles, we act kindly, patiently, lovingly and are tolerant. If I try to force a solution without my I Am Self’s guidance, then I am claiming to know better than. That is exerting my self-will.

If you find yourself fearful and judgmental, pray fully and ask your I Am for guidance on how to live in love and not let fear dictate your behavior; and to help you to learn how to not let fear inform your decisions.

Be teachable. “...let yourself be lifted by your new understanding, that you may know that you are all that the Christ is...Feel yourself to be this Christ, and let the Christ power empower you.” (Souls Ego pg. 59)

In Love and Light,

Rev. Vicki
