“Thanksgiving is a day of gratitude, reflection, history, and togetherness. It allows us to appreciate our blessings, acknowledge the past, and strengthen the bonds that define us.”

Thanksgiving is a cherished holiday that holds a special place in my heart. It's has been a time for my family to come together to share a hearty meal and reflect on the blessings in our lives.

First and foremost, Thanksgiving is a day of gratitude. It prompts us to pause and appreciate the abundance in our lives, from the simple joys to the grand achievements. As we gather around the table, we take stock of our blessings, both big and small, and express our thanks for the good fortune that has come our way.

Thanksgiving also serves as a reminder to me of my family's history. My family were early German settlers who, in the face of adversity, found hope and friendship among their farming community in Illinois. Their cooperative farming spirit exemplified the ideals of unity, tolerance, and understanding, values that remain relevant today. This holiday underscores the importance of cherishing the diversity that enriches our communities.

Furthermore, Thanksgiving fosters connection and togetherness. It is a day when families and friends put aside their busy lives, often traveling many miles to gather under one roof, and create cherished memories. Sharing a meal symbolizes the bonds of kinship and the love that sustains us. In a fast-paced world, it offers a rare opportunity to reconnect with our roots and reinforce the ties that bind us.

On a broader scale, Thanksgiving inspires acts of kindness and charity. Many communities use this time to give back to those less fortunate, exemplifying the spirit of generosity and empathy that the holiday represents.

As we celebrate this day, let's remember the reasons why we gather and the values it represents.

Happy Thanksgiving to you and your loved ones,
Rev. Vicki Walker

“A song of thanksgiving shall burst from your soul like the choirs of the angels and shall ring down upon the earth to pronounce my coming. As I come unto you, extend your hands – one to me, and one to another – for in the extension you will shed your light to the world. As one gives their hand to another, so shall our love in oneness be combined” Soul's Ego, Channeled messages from Jesus.
